SUSTAINABILITY IN PUBLICATION LINE

Dear Scientists,

With its 35th issue, Journal of Turkology Researches (TÜBAR) is now halfway through its 19th year. While it is gratifying that we are walking steady, we know that it requires sustainability. And to have such “sustainable” position, we plan to make some changes in the next issue of our journal when it turns 19. These changes will -definitely- be shaped and finalized with the resolution of the Editorial Board; however questions which will be included in the agenda for sure can be listed as follows:

1. Publication line of TÜBAR: In what field do the articles published till now position TÜBAR? Is this field in full compliancy with the commitments of the journal?
2. What are the common and distinctive features of the journal compared with the other journals published in the same field?
3. What are the weaknesses and strengths of TÜBAR –as a periodical-?
4. The point which we have reached requires which type of publications in the future?
5. Is the online website of TÜBAR satisfactory? What kind of improvements are necessary, if any?

The Editorial Board is open to requests and proposals of the readers and scientists in this respect.

Having said that; some changes in the Editorial Board, which has been serving with same members for long time now, would also be necessary.

The “TÜBAR Articles Index” (provided for each set of five issues since the publication of the 15th issue) prepared for the 40th issue will be inclusive of all articles published till then.

However, due to the fact that the articles index has reached a big volume, the following indexes will be including only those published after the 40th issue.

With each new issue published, we are hoping to surpass the previous ones and achieve something better...
