EXTENDED SUMMARY

Problem: The detection of undergraduate students’ opinion over graduate education is important for teacher training. In this study, it has been tried to determine the views of the teachers.

Method: The study has been carried out with qualitative research method.

Findings: 50% of primary school teacher candidates consider to receive graduate education. 42% of them do not wish to receive graduate education.

Conclusions and Recommendations: Candidate shaving the appropriate qualifications for admission wish to attend the graduate education. Some of them have the belief that the education is inadequate. It has been perceived that financial concerns are also reflected over graduate education. There appear some candidates considering higher education as a waste of time as well. Some candidates point to the subject of objective acceptance. Candidates should be guided about graduate education and incentive measures should be taken.